What it is for

A page to hand to your committee or to another club: Reefwise in brief, what each person gains and how to begin. It can be saved as a PDF with the button at the top of the page.

Reefwise in one sentence

Reefwise brings together the dive log, fish recognition on photos and club life (memberships, outings, polls, messaging) in an iPhone app, a web space and a public site.

For the club

- A public page in the club directory, with its events open to everyone.
- Memberships per season: prices and options, online requests, import of the member list, follow-up of payments.
- Outings and courses: registrations, automatic waiting list, car sharing, event photos approved by the club.
- Polls and notifications sent to members.
- The equipment inventory and practical guides written and reviewed by the club.

For instructors

- Courses with activities per level: everyone registers for the activity that suits them.
- The list of registered and unregistered members, with a one-tap reminder.
- Club guides for instructions: pool sessions, filling, organisation of an outing.

For divers

- A dive log: entry on the web, import and export in UDDF format.
- Fish recognition on their photos, and live with the iPhone camera.
- Colour correction of underwater photos.
- Sharing a dive with the club, and messaging between members.

What Reefwise does not do

- It is not a dive computer. On Apple Watch, depth is only measured down to about 6 m.

- There is no online payment: the club records the payments received.
- The donation tax receipt is only issued if the club states it is entitled to: it alone answers for it.
- Species recognition can be wrong: each proposal is confirmed or corrected.
- The Android app is being tested; some features only exist on the iPhone or the web space.

Your data

- A dive is private by default. Its author chooses to share it with the club or to make it public.
- A public dive only shows an approximate position.
- The club decides who follows it: a follow request is accepted or refused, and a follow can be withdrawn.
- Everyone can delete their account and their data.

Price

Reefwise is free for now, for the club and for its members. A contribution of about €1 per member per year may be asked in the future.

Start in four steps

1. Request the creation of the club from the public site (“Create and set up your club”).
2. Open the season and its prices (“Manage seasons and memberships”).
3. Bring the members in by invitation code or by import (“Welcome your members”).
4. Publish a first outing (“Organise an event and run a poll”).

Allow one evening to set up the club, and one message to tell your members.
